Seesaw Hotspot

Seesaw is great for children of all ages! You can use Seesaw on lots of different devices - ipads, tablets, chromebooks, laptops and even kindle! Its use of multiple platforms makes it the best app to use for any age level in class!

Check out this great example on how young students can use Seesaw on chromebooks too! This has lots of ideas and even has lots of links to examples and resources! A great resource bank!

What's the apps?

Looking for a simple way to record quick and easy videos? Then use Screencastify! An amazing tool that records your screen, webcam or tab; with overlapping voice or annotation recording! Simply add the extension to your chrome browser and use it to make your recordings! The best thing about the videos are that they are saved online to a google drive folder which makes it easy to share your videos with others! Great tool for all educators!

Twitter find

How strong is your mental strength? I must say this is something I neglect currently and need to work on doing a few of these daily. My favourite is get physical and learn to say no. I definitely know others that need to practice these things Also. Mental strength is the most important part of your mind and body that you should always be looking to strengthen. I wonder what you will work on to develop this?

Let's get Googley

How much do you understand and know your digital footprint? Google for education has these great #applieddigitalskills lessons that explain and explore digital footprints for your students and the classroom. So simple to use and detailed for students of all levels to understand! Such an important thing to learn about for students, teachers and leaders!

Did you know you can add audio to Google slides presentations? Such a great tip and tool to use to add that extra amazingness to your slides!
